

Other activities that reflect peer recognition of scholarly activity include: acquisition of funding for scholarly activities; service on study sections, professional society committees, research review boards, Institutional Review Boards, federal committees or advisory groups, editorial boards, or as a reviewer for peer reviewed journals; service as a military specialty consultant; selection as a teaching chief or program director; award of performance based honors or medals; election to learned societies; organizational awards, prizes and honorary degrees; and other expressions of peer recognized creativity or innovation.